

TRANSPORTATION FAIRNESS ALLIANCE

WHO WE ARE

The Transportation Fairness Alliance is a diverse partnership of groups that support a competitive and equitable transportation sector. Collectively, we represent our nation's manufacturers, small business owners, farmers and folks who drive on our roads and pay utility bills.

While coalition members are united by their shared concerns about our nation's current transportation system, they arrived at those conclusions because of different considerations, ranging from the deterioration of America's rural roads and bridges, to higher grain costs associated with utility rate hikes, to concerns about the regressive nature of transportation-related tax credits and mandates.

What unites our members is a desire to have a rational, balanced conversation about how transportation fairness can be achieved.

TRANSPORTATION FAIRNESS PRIORITIES

Our coalition believes in fairness and equity in American transportation, consumer choice, and sound science. Though we may not agree on every issue, some of the issues we are focused on include:

- Everyone who uses our roads should help pay for their construction and upkeep
- Utilities should not raise rates for everyone to cover the cost of EV infrastructure and chargers that serve only a very few
- Utilities and non-utilities should be on a level playing field when it comes to charging infrastructure
  - Allowing all companies, not just utilities, to sell electricity to EVs will encourage competition
- Government transportation incentives should not be directed toward competitive technologies that have reached commercial scale
- State governments should respect consumer choice
  - They shouldn't ban gas-powered cars or set vehicle quotas that require families and auto dealers to buy or sell a minimum percentage of EVs

THE BOTTOM LINE

Our mission is transportation fairness. Our coalition is working to ensure all American drivers are treated equally when it comes to their transportation choices.
